What are Cookies

As is common practice with almost all professional websites the Crescent Dental Care site uses cookies. A cookie is a tiny file that is downloaded to your computer in order to improve your experience. This Cookie Policy describes what information they gather, how we use it and why we sometimes need to store these cookies. We will also detail how you can disable these cookies from being stored, although this may downgrade or even break certain elements of this site's functionality.

How we use Cookies

We use cookies for a variety of reasons on the Crescent Dental Care website which are detailed below. Unfortunately there are no industry standard options for blocking cookies without completely disabling the features and functionality they provide to this website. It is recommended that you leave all cookies on if you are not sure whether you need them or not in case they are used to deliver a service that you use.

Blocking our use of Cookies

You can block our use of cookies by adjusting the setting in your web browser (see your browser help for how to do this). Please be aware that by blocking cookies the functionality of this and many other websites you visit will be affected. Disabling cookies will usually result in certain features and functionality of this website also being disabled. Therefore it is recommended that you do not disable cookies.

The Cookies we set:

Session Cookies

We use cookies in order to uniquely identify a user's browsing session whilst using the Crescent Dental Care website. Session cookies are stored temporarily and are automatically removed when you close your web browser or your browsing session using the site ends.

Analytics

We use Google Analytics which is one of the most widespread and trusted analytics solutions on the web. As well as allowing us to anonymously identify users, these cookies can also calculate the number of website and page views as well as how long people spend using the site. This is used to help us to understand how you use the Crescent Dental Care website and ways we can improve your experience.
